

HOW TO OBTAIN REGISTERED PSYCHOLOGIST STATUS IN THE UK?

-  To work as a registered psychologist, one needs to register with HCPC (Health and Care Professionals Council) after completing a specialization in psychology programmes such as clinical psychology/Neuropsychology, educational psychology, forensic psychology, occupational psychology, sport and exercise psychology in the UK.
-  To register with HCPC, a student must hold a BPS (British Psychological Society) accredited degree.
-  UG degree from India doesn't hold BPS accreditation, hence does not allow Indian students to get into BPS-accredited specialised areas in psychology such as clinical psychology, Neuropsychology, forensic psychology and others.
-  Indian students have the opportunity to apply for a BPS-accredited master's degree that is a conversion course. It's not mandatory for the student to have a BPS-accredited undergraduate degree in a related field to obtain this BPS accredited qualification.
-  Otherwise, students may try to obtain BPS accreditation based on modules (if substantial core psychology modules were taught at UG level) by sending the curriculum for assessment.
